THIS DOCUMENT CONTAINS INFORMATION AFFECTING THE NATIONAL DEFENSE
OF THE UNITED STATES WITHIN THE MEANING OF THE ESPIONAGE ACT SO
U. S. C. 51 AND 52, AS AMENDED. ITS TRANSMISSION OR THE REVELATION
OF ITS CONTENTS IN ANY MANNER TO AN UNAUTHORIZED PERSON IS PRO-
HIBITED BY LAW. REPRODUCTION OF THIS FORM IS PROHIBITED.

THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION

1. In late June a number of Soviet and Chinese Communist instructors and 3,000 students were at the Chinese Communist National Defense University, which was established in the spring of 1950 by the Revolutionary Military Council at the former site of the Chahar Training Corps of the Nationalist Pacification Corps in Kalgan. About 2,400 of these students were selected from middle schools and colleges and the rest from the army. The university has the following departments: national defense engineering, national defense economics, and national defense medicine. The honorary head of the school is MAO Tse-tung, the honorary deputy head is CHU Te. The actual head of the school is LAN Kung-wu ( 蓝公武 )<sup>1</sup>, a 64 year old native of Soochow, Kiangsu, and a graduate of the Tokyo Imperial University, class of 1911. He joined the Chinese Communists in the fall of 1945 and was a former member of the Nationalist Congress and head of a news agency.
2. Since early July authorities in Wenchow are conducting an intensive campaign to recruit students and young workers for a Chinese Communist Military and Political Academy. By 16 July 820 had applied and of these 98 students and 52 young workers had already qualified for the academy.
3. In accordance with an edict from the Government Council, the Bureau of Education, Shanghai, in early July started to assign jobs to all June 1951 middle school and college graduates who were not continuing their education. This practice will be followed for all future graduating classes.<sup>2</sup>
4. In June 1951, 1,300 students were graduated from Shanghai middle schools and colleges. Among them were 500 mechanical, civil, and chemical engineering students.
